Help ODPC Address Co-occurring IDD and Mental Health Concerns

Information posted April 16, 2018

The Office of Disability Prevention for Children and the Intellectual and Developmental Disabilities & Behavioral Health Department are partnering to address co-occurring intellectual and developmental disabilities (IDD) and mental health conditions. A stakeholder meeting will be held to discuss existing efforts and ways to address the gaps in services for individuals with co-occurring IDD and mental health concerns. Come in person or join via webinar to provide input and learn more about what HHSC is working on in regards to co-occurring intellectual and developmental disability, and mental health concerns.
